PREFACE.

No apology is offered for this work, for without pride of ancestry posterity is an accident.

Those who may not emulate ancestors are poor creatures, and those who condemn such aspirations lack the essence of "that virtue which makes all men true and leal, all women pure."

FOREWORD.

The uncertainty of my ability ever to publish the elaborate genealogical record of the Heyward family, which I have at great pains almost finished compiling, induces me to forthwith furnish the family with this epitome of it.

Most of the genealogical information relates to the history of the three earliest, or, more strictly speaking, Colonial, generations in Carolina, about whom there has hitherto been more by way of tradition than the official record of documents.

Whilst traditions are not necessarily nursery tales, very little is of much value that cannot be more or less verified by some public record; therefore be it noted that whoever reads what is herein stated will also have the satisfaction of learning the place, volume, and page of public record when confirmation is to be had.

Then follows a concise abbreviated birth brief of the fourth generation in Carolina from which emanated the four great branches in the fifth generation, which might be called the "Revolutionary generation."

Lastly follows a condensed, but lucid, explanation as to how living descendants can trace their lineage back through any one of the said four stems to the pioneer, as well as learning their respective consanguinity.

THE NAME.

The pioneer of the family spelling their name HEYWARD in America was amongst the earliest of those enterprising English colonists who settled on the Ashley River in Carolina during that period known as the "Proprietary Government of the Carolinas."

The precise date of his arrival is not established, but his will indicates that he came from Derby, England. Without dealing too much in surmise, it may be safely assumed that the name spelled HEYWARD is easily to be found for several centuries in use within a certain circuit around where the Carolina pioneer said in his will that his brother, Thomas, lived, as a certain instrument of public record takes the name as spelled by the pioneer as far back as A.D. 1500—to wit: The Abbot and Convent of Keynsham, in the county of Somerset, made a grant by indenture reciting: "Whereas one Edmund L. holds and occupies certain tenements with lands, meadows, . . . in Batwell for the term of his life, etc.; the said Abbot and Convent in consideration of twenty pounds in the name of a fine have granted and by these presents do demise to the said Thomas Heyward the remainder in said tenement." Dyer's Reports, Vol. 1, p. 46, reign of Henry VIII.

Again, we find a deed in which "Sir Rowland Heyward, knight, seized in fee of the meadows of Dodderrington and Wenlock, alias Round Acton and Wenlock, in the county of Salop, bargains, sells, etc." Coke's Reports, Vol. 1, p. 524.

So much of a great deal more that the name spelled HEYWARD was the way that the ancestors of the Carolina pioneer spelled their name

“ That man lives happily on a little who can view with pleasure the old-fashioned salt cellar on his frugal board; neither anxiety nor sordid avarice robs him of gentle sleep.”

Generation I.

I. DANIEL HEYWARD, born, unknown; died September —, 1684.

He left no record as to who his wife was.

They had issue.

2. Daniel Heyward, b. Aug. 19, 1673; d. before 1684.
3. Thomas Heyward, b. Aug. 19, 1673; d. 1699.
 - m. Margaret Wright—issue.
4. Elizabeth Heyward, b. Oct. 18, 1676; d. before 1684.
5. Samuel Heyward, b. Sept. 20, 1678; d. before 1690.

A memorandum handed down to the compiler in the handwriting of and signed by Capt. Nathaniel Heyward, No. 21 of this record, is the authority for the above birth brief, and reads as follows: "In a curious old book published in 1532, called 'An Exposition of the Creed,' by John Smith, it appears that Daniel Heyward wrote his name in 1672, and by his memorandum they had two sons born 19th of August, 1673, Daniel and Thomas; also a daughter, Elizabeth, born October 18, 1676; also another son, Samuel, born September 20, 1678."

The will of Daniel Heyward is to be found recorded in Volume of Wills, 1672-1692, p. 217, in the office of the South Carolina Historical Commission at Columbia, S. C., and reads as follows:

In the name of God, Amen, I, Daniel Haward of Charlestowne in said Province of Carolina being weak in body but sound in mind doe make this my last Will and Testament in form and manner as followeth: Imp. My Will is that my whole Estate, money, goods, chattels, all whatsoever and wheresoever it is, be equally divided and distributed between my two sons, Thomas Haward and Samuel Haward and that this distribution be made when my son Samuel arrives at the age of twenty years.

In the meantime all my Estate is to be left together and improved and both my said children be maintained upon it—And my Will is that if either of my said sons shall die before the time appointed for the division of my Estate that the whole Estate shall entirely be given to him that survives.

Finally, my Will is that Mr. John Gwin of Charlestowne and Mr. William White neare Charlestowne together with my deare brother Thomas Haward of Little Eaton neare Derby in England be joynt executors of this my last Will and Testament; and I do Will and earnestly desire that my loveing and Trusty Executors Mr. Gwin and Mr. White do their endeavor to sell my goods and chattels in Carolina and send the produce thereof with my above said children as soon as may be into England to my above named brother, whom I entreat to be careful in the education of my children and in the improvement of my Estate for them.

In witness thereof I unto this my last Will and Testament have put my Hand and Seale this first day of October A. D. 1684.

Note.—There can be no question as to the date, “ first day of October,” in the foregoing will being error of scribe for that of September, as the attestation to the preceding will recorded in the same book bears date of September 7, 1684, and recorded on the 13th.

Query: Was the above the will of Daniel Heyward?

Be it noted that the spelling of any name in the older records means little. They are copies of instruments hard themselves to be deciphered, which copies were made by clerks so careless that the names Howard, Haward, and Hayward, all referring to one person, appear in the same instrument of writing, whilst the contents of the paper substantiate the name intended was that of Heyward.

Daniel Heyward did not write his own will, and his signature is by mark, not autograph, so the scribe spelled the name Haward; nevertheless, continuing links substantiate said will to be that of Daniel Heyward. That he could write is established by the memorandum handed down by Capt. Nathaniel Heyward, No. 21 of this record, so it may be presumed that he was on his deathbed and unable to write.

Whether or not he was a man of much means, his will does not establish, but he certainly had enough, and intended to use whatever was necessary toward the education of his sons, possibly upon the principle: “ Crafty men contemn studies, simple men admire them, and wise men use them.”

Our next step is to identify Thomas (No. 3) as the son of Daniel Heyward, the pioneer, to which end is the record of letters of guardianship for him. Vide Volume of Wills, 1672-1692, p. 424, reading as follows:

Carolina S.

James Colleton Esqr. Landgrave and Governor of the part of the Province of Carolina that lies from Cape Fear River South and West:

the same return under their hands into the Secretary's Office within ninety days next after the date hereof—And that you do well and truly satisfy and pay all and every the Deceased's debts to the Lords Proprietors and all other persons whatsoever, as Guardians and Administrators ought to do—And that you do render an account of the said Guardianship and Administratorship whensoever you shall be thereunto loyally required—And also that you at all times well and truly save harmless the Lords Proprietors, me and all officers and ministers against all persons by reason of the said Guardianship and Administratorship.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms at Charlestowne ye day of ——— A. D. 1690. JAMES COLLETON.

On p. 90, Vol. 1696-1703, will be found another item of identification of Thomas Heyward (No. 3), as follows:

To ALL People to whom these Presents shall come to be seen, heard or read; I, William White of the County of Berkley of Carolina, Planter, send greeting: Whereas a certain decree under the Hand and Seal of the Rt. Hon. Seth Sothel, Esq. of the Province of Carolina dated Jan. 30, 1690-1 was issued out of the Hon. Court of Chancery for this part of said Province ordering and requiring me the said William White the Surviving Executor hereof of the last Will and Testament of Daniel Haward late of the said Province, Deceased, together with Sarah Gwin widow, and relict of John Gwin, Deceased, late one of the other Executors of the said last Will and Testament, to pay and deliver to Thomas Bolton, Merchant; and James Stanyarne, Tanner; Guardians of Thomas Heyward orphan of the said Daniel Heyward to the use of the said orphan Eighty one pounds, six shillings and six pence sterling—Together with a parcel of goods belonging to the said orphan to the value of Nineteen pounds, four shillings and nine pence as shall in and by the said Decree more fully appears, etc., etc. WILLIAM WHITE.

Memo. This tenth day of Nov. A. D. 1694 personally appeared before me Mr. Daniel Courtis and Mr. Findla Martin and being duly sworn saith that they did see the above named William White Sign and Seal and as his act and deed deliver the above Bill of Sale to the use therein mentioned. WILLIAM SMITH.

The foregoing instruments covering a period from 1684 to 1694 indicate that Daniel Heyward, the pioneer, either did not die as he expected soon after the execution of his will, but lived as late as 1690, when administrators are directed to marshal his estate, pay his debts, etc., or what is more probable—viz., that he did die soon after making his will, but his executors had so failed to carry into effect the intent of said will, that when Thomas, the orphan, reached the age of seventeen years, he demanded investigation, resulting in the appointment of guardians for himself, who were also made administrators of the estate of his father, and that these administrators brought about the accounting aforesaid by the executors.

Having identified Thomas Heyward (No. 3) as the only surviving son of Daniel Heyward, the pioneer, to proceed:

There is no parish record of his marriage—none existed at that early date of the province, neither can it be substantiated that his wife was born Margaret Wright. Old seraps of writing, however (found by the writer), among the papers left by her grandson, Col. Daniel Heyward, No. 7 of this record, leave little doubt that she was born a Wright; and if she was, then she was probably the daughter of John Wright, one of the early commissioners for Indians and many times a member of the Assembly of Carolina.

That the wife of Thomas Heyward (No. 3) was Margaret (Wright?), and not Hester Taylor, as some family records state, the following instrument, Vol. 1696-1703, of miscellaneous records at Columbia, S. C., establishes:

Carolina S.

This indenture made this eighteenth day of November, A. D. 1700 between Margaret Heyward of Charlestowne in the said Province on the one part and William Elliott of Berkley County in said Province, bricklayer; and Joseph Keys of the said Towne and Province aforesaid on the other part, Witnesseth That whereas Thomas Hayward late of the Towne and Province aforesaid, Deceased, and Husband to the said Margaret was seized in his demesne as of fee and in one quarter part of a Towne lot (No. 26) with the appurtenances thereunto belonging; and so being seized, by his last Will and Testament in writing bearing date the 28th day of September A. D. 1699 did among other things devise, give and bequeath the said quarter part of said Towne lot and appurtenances to the said Margaret in manner and form and in these words following, viz: "Item, I give, grant and bequeath to my Deare and Beloved Wife Margaret Hayward all my worldly Estate real and personal to her, her heirs and assigns forever." As in and by said last Will and Testament filed in the Secretary's Office doth appear—Now these Presents Witness that for said Margaret Hayward in part performance of a certain agreement had and made between the said Margaret and one Joseph Keys of the Towne and Province aforesaid, upon a marriage by the Grace of God to be had and solemnized between the said Joseph Keys and the said Margaret, and for the natural love and affection which she beareth to Thomas Hayward her son by Thomas Hayward above mentioned and for divers other good causes, To have and to Hold said quarter-part of said Towne lot unto the said William Elliott and Joseph Keys their heirs, etc., etc.

So much for the genealogy established by aforesaid trust deed and marriage settlement, the instrument going on to provide: (1) That the property was to be held in trust for said Margaret until her son, Thomas Heyward, attained his majority, at which time it was to be delivered to her son, Thomas Heyward; (2) in the event her son died before he was of age, the property was to return to Margaret herself, to be disposed of as she chose; (3) in the event Thomas outlived his mother, yet died under age, then the property was to pass to John Keys, son of said Joseph Keys. Following the above is a second similar instrument relating to personalty.

Another item of interest relating to Thomas Heyward (No. 3), son of Daniel, is the following record in the Journals of the House of Commons at Charles Town, dated November 16, 1700, as follows:

Whereas by order of Assembly bearing date 19th day of Nov. 1698 James Risbee Esqr. was to pay to Thomas Hayward then Powder Receiver, One Hundred and Three pounds of clean serviceable gun powder being so much due to the public from said James Risbee for powder he received for the public—And the said Thomas Hayward dying before the powder was delivered, etc., etc.

Assented to by the Upper House.

JAMES MOORE.

Generation II.

Now the office of Powder Receiver was one of the most important posts under the Proprietary Government, as powder was a commodity of as much consequence as money.

So then Thomas Heyward, son of the pioneer, was an official of the Proprietary Government, and did leave a will, dated September 28, 1699. Furthermore, he did leave a son born either just before or, more probably, just after his death, who was called Thomas.

Margaret, his widow, married, secondly, Joseph Keys, and they seem to have had issue, as later records show that letters of guardianship were issued to Joseph Wragg for "Jane, infant daughter of Joseph Keys;" and later still St. Philip's Parish register records the marriage of Jane Keys to John Wright, so that those who "build castles" may ask: Did Jane marry her cousin in the son of her mother's brother, "John Wright?"

FOOTNOTE.—The christening names of James and Nathaniel continuously retained in the Heyward family were Taylor family names. There was a Nathaniel Taylor of the same generation and locality as that of John Taylor, father of our Hester.

Generation III.

Capt. Thomas Heyward left a will as follows:

I, Thomas Heyward of James Island, Berkley County and Province of South Carolina, hatmaker, being Weak of body but of Sound and Disposing Mind and memory, Praised be God for the same, well knowing it is appointed for all men to die (tho time uncertain) I commit my Body to be decently buried in full hope and assurance it shall be raised up again at the General Resurrection through the merits only of my Savior Jesus Christ; and as to such worldly goods as it has pleased the Almighty to bless me with I give, demise and bequeath in manner and form the following.

Recorded Jan. 20, 1743-4.

Thomas Heyward (No. 6), grandson of Daniel, has the tradition attached to his career "that he was drafted to fight the Indians during the Yemassee uprising in 1715, and that his mother petitioned the Governor for his release, as he was an only son and orphan just sixteen years old." The first public record, however, will be found in Vol. 1717-1719, p. 280, at Columbia, S. C., when he applies for prize money as one of the volunteer crew of the sloop Revenge, Capt. John Masters, forming one of the fleet which, under command of Governor Johnson, captured the pirate Richard Worley, who, with the notorious Stede Bonnet and others, had for some time been harassing the commerce along the Carolina coast.

The next record occurs March 25, 1724, p. 74, Vol. 7 of Journal of Commons (Assembly of Carolina), when the church wardens of St. Andrew's Parish (who in that day were supervisors of election) returned William Cattle, Henry Toomer, and Thomas Heyward as elected members of the Assembly, which Assembly continued until January 31, 1727.

The next record occurs in the Journals of Council (Upper House) April 10, 1725, where the commissioners are directed to be "forthwith prepared for Mr. Thomas Heyward to be captain of James Island Company."

Further indentification of Thomas Heyward (No. 6) will be found in Vol. H, p. 20, at Charleston, where a deed, dated March 12, 1728-1729, conveying aforesaid lot No. 26 by Thomas Heyward and Hester, his wife, to John Raven, reciting: "Whereas Thomas Heyward, by his last will, dated September 8, 1699, etc., to Margaret, his lawful wife; and whereas said Margaret Heyward, now deceased, did by deed, November 18, 1700, grant to said Thomas Heyward, her son, by Thomas Heyward, deceased, etc., said Thomas Heyward and Hester, his wife, etc., to John Raven, etc. Proved before Judge Wright, March 20, 1728."

Again, an Act in 1734, etc., for that part of St. Andrew's Parish called James Island, Capt. Thomas Heyward and William Scriven were appointed Inquirers of Collectors of Taxes. Vide Statutes at Large, Vol. 3, p. 353.

Again, an Act in 1734 for the better regulating the patrol system resulted in the election of Thomas Heyward as captain. Vide Statutes at Large, Vol. 3, p. 395.

It is probable that Capt. Thomas Heyward was the first of his family in Carolina who lived outside of Charles Town. A second tradition attached to him is that he received large grants of land in Granville County, or Indian land, as it was then called, in reward for his services during several Indian uprisings.

Now then, nothing that the public records show of the life of Capt. Thomas Heyward confirms either that he ever did much service as an Indian fighter, or, indeed, that there was much Indian fighting going on during his life, nor is there any record that he ever commanded (as tradition has it) at Fort Johnson; but he is referred to in a receipt by the captain of Fort Johnson when he, Thomas Heyward, was a member of the Assembly. As to the land grants, the tradition is not substantiated either in his own will or in that of his eldest son, Col. Daniel Heyward, who bequeathed some twenty-five thousand acres of land to his various descendants, but in describing each tract Col. Daniel Heyward distinctly traces the title either by grant to himself or to some other party from whom he bought the land.

Five of the sons of Capt. Thomas Heyward lived and became very prosperous men, but this seems to have been due to their own enterprise and industry, rather than inheritance.

Capt. Thomas Heyward, however, was a well-to-do citizen for his day, as, besides his plantations and slaves on James Island, his advertisements in the South Carolina Gazette show that he owned considerable real estate in Charles Town.

As to his place of burial, many old family records state that he, his wife Hester, and all of their children who died young, as well as the first and second wives of their second son, Thomas, and each of their respective children who died young, were buried at the old homestead on James Island.

Generation III.

Exactly where this homestead was is not certain. Some family records state that it is the place known as "Cuthbert," near Dill's Bluff, on New Town Creek, just across the river in front of South Battery in Charleston.

Whilst an old military map made about 1780 marks said location as land of "Heyward," and whilst it certainly became the home of Gen. John Alexander Cuthbert, who married Mary du Pre (No. 35), it is much more apt to have been land obtained by Thomas Heyward (No. 8), son of Capt. Thomas Heyward and father of Mrs. Cuthbert, than the original home of Capt. Thomas Heyward himself. The size of the tract later on sold by Ann, widow and executrix of James, eldest son of General Cuthbert, to the Lawton family, the present owners, does not correspond with any description of land in the will of Capt. Thomas Heyward.

It is very much more probable that Capt. Thomas Heyward lived, died, and lies buried (together with all of the above-named members of his family) on lands certainly fixed to have been his on that part of James Island bordering on Stono River described in an "Act for the establishment of ferries, one over Stono River from Colonel Hext's plantation to Mr. Thomas Heyward's plantation on James Island." Vide Grimke's Laws, p. 137.

7. COL. DANIEL HEYWARD (Capt. Thomas⁶, Thomas⁵, Daniel⁴), of "Euhaws," Parish of St. Luke, Granville County, S. C., was born on James Island, February 20, 1720, and died, October 23, 1777, and is buried with several of his descendants at his home called "Old House," where he spent his life, a few miles south of Grahamville, S. C. Left will.

He married, first, Mary, daughter of William Miles, of the Parish of St. Andrew, S. C. She was born in 1727 and died in 1761.

Their children were:

14. Thomas Heyward, b. 1746; d. 1809.
 - m. 1st. Elizabeth Matthews—issue.
 - m. 2nd. Elizabeth Savage—issue.
15. Nathaniel Heyward, b. 1748; d. y.
16. Maria Heyward, b. —; d. y.
17. Daniel Heyward, b. 1750; d. —.
 - m. Margaret Heyward (No. 29)—no issue.
18. Hester Heyward, b. 1751; d. y.
19. William Heyward, b. 1753; d. 1786.
 - m. Hannah Shubrick—issue.

Col. Daniel Heyward (No. 7) married, secondly, Jane Elizabeth, daughter of John Gignilliat, of the Parish of St. Helena, S. C. She was born in 1743 and died in 1761.

Their children were:

20. James Heyward, b. 1764; d. 1796.
 - m. Susan Cole, of England—no issue.
21. Nathaniel Heyward, b. 1766; d. 1851.
 - m. Henrietta Manigault—issue.
22. Maria Heyward, b. 1767; d. 1837.
 - m. Col. William Brailsford—issue.

Generation IV.

Col. Daniel Heyward (No. 7) married, thirdly, Elizabeth, daughter of Benjamin Simons, of Charles Town, S. C. She was born in 1747 and died in 1788.

Their children were:

23. Elizabeth Heyward, b. — ; d. y.
24. Benjamin Heyward, b. 1776; d. unmarried, 1796.

ARMS.

In close succession will be found a copy each of the Memorial, which explains itself; of the Warrant; and of the Patent, dated December 1, 1768, issued to the family of Heyward, of South Carolina, the same being one of the very few ever issued directly to a Colonial family. The Arms in use in America generally being taken from those used in the mother countries by such families as the American families claim to be affiliated.

The Patent of the Heyward Arms is in perfect preservation, now in the custody of Col. W. Izard Heyward, of Marietta, Ga., and bears all the evidence of authenticity by the seal attached and the indorsements of record.

Strange though it be, a discrepancy exists between the Patent and the record thereof at the College of Arms in London. In the Patent the weapon forming part of the Crest is described as a "tomahawk," and is depicted with blade down, as it would be held when about to be thrown by an Indian; but the record at the College of Arms depicts the weapon blade up, as a "battle axe" is held.

This confusion is only explicable by the fact that the old watch mentioned in the Will of Capt. Thomas Heyward, No. 6 of this record, which is still in existence, has engraved thereon a "battle axe."

Now if, as it is probable, the watch was taken to London in substantiation of the claim that the family in Carolina had "long used Arms," then it is possible that the recording clerk copied the Crest from the watch, negligent of the desired change from a "battle axe" to a "tomahawk," illustrative of Colonial life.

However this may be, the fact remains that those members of the family who own seals or silver, with the Crest engraved thereon, in London (reference probably being had to the record), have the Arm with "battle axe, blade up;" whilst those who have had the opportunity to copy the Patent itself in Carolina have the Arm with "tomahawk, blade down;" and some have both styles.

Queer to tell, the seal used by Thomas Heyward, Junior, No. 14 of this record (who, whilst taking his law course in London, presented the Memorial in behalf of his father, Daniel Heyward, to whom the Warrant directs the Patent to be issued), has the Crest with a "tomahawk, blade down," as is to be seen in documents to which he himself affixed his seal; yet the seals used by the descendants of said Thomas Heyward, Junior, have thereon a "battle axe, blade up," as it is on the old watch left by his grandfather, Capt. Thomas Heyward.

IN FINIS.

The history of the family of Heyward, of Carolina, decisively classifies them as “country folk.” Whilst during the first seven generations in Carolina each family owned a house in some city or town, they regarded such simply as places of resort, for as soon as cool weather permitted they “hied home.”

Great success has attended the efforts of many of the name in agriculture, whilst only a few ever attained any prominence in law, medicine, or politics, and none in trade.

With a limited number noted for their beauty, the women of the name reached super-excellence in modesty and chastity, each and every one making happy homes; whilst the wives of the men found each a partner “who loved no music so well as his kitchen clock, and the airs which the logs sung to him as they burned on the hearth.”

Twenty of the name served South Carolina in the Confederate War, and the loss to the family by the result was over four thousand slaves.
